WARSAW (Capital of Poland) Oct. 6.

THE Prince Primate having notified by a letter, to the King of Pruſſia, the election and acceſſion of Count Staniſlaus-Auguſtus Poniatowſki to the throne of Poland, that Prelate has received from his Pruſſian Majeſty the following anſwer.

"Couſin,

"Your letter of the 7th of laſt month, by which you acquaint me with the unanimous election of his Excellency Count Poniatowſki, Stolnk of Lithuania, to the throne of Poland, has given me unſpeakable ſatisfaction. 'Tis an event in which I intereſt myſelf the more, as it exactly compleats my wiſhes, at the ſame time, that it anſwers the moſt eſſential intereſts of the republic, which I had only in view, when I propoſed and recommended for King, him who is now the actual Sovereign. Thoroughly ſenſible of your confidence, and the regard you have ſhewn for the recommendation, I felicitate your highneſs and the whole republic, on a choice, which, not only in itſelf, but the manner in which it was made, ought to draw on the Poliſh nation an Eclat of glory, an immortal reputation, and proſperities inſeparable from a happy government; which, for my part, I wiſh you with as much ſincerity as ardour. As to the reſt, I pray God to take you into his holy and worthy keeping.

Your affectionate Couſin,
(ſigned) FREDERICK."

Extract of a Letter from Paris, Sept. 8.

THE celebrated Mr. Hume has been allowed by the preſident of the Iriſh college here to peruſe and make extracts from a curious collection of manuſcript memoirs, in eleven or twelve volumes in folio, compoſed by King James the ſecond, and all written with his own hand. Theſe memoirs not only comprehended the reign of that unworthy and bungling monarch, who ſacrificed three kingdoms for a maſs, but alſo that of his brother and predeceſſor Charles the ſecond.—They contain a variety of curious anecdotes, ſome important pieces as yet ſcarcely known but by vague conjectures, and throw light upon ſeveral parts of the hiſtory of that intereſting period. They exhibit, among other things, a particular account of the famous treaty between Charles the ſecond and Lewis the fourteenth, whoſe double object was the conqueſt and partition of the united provinces, and the eſtabliſhment of popery in Great-Britain and Ireland. It is to be hoped, that the learned and ingenious hiſtorian, who has been admitted to a view of theſe arcana of government, will make a proper and impartial uſe of them, and thus furniſh the friends of both civil and religious liberty with a new reaſon for remembering with ſatisfaction that happy and glorious revolution that delivered the Britiſh iſle from the bigotry and tyranny of the Stewarts, and placed them under the benign government of patriot princes of the Brunſwick line. If I am not miſtaken or miſinformed, there is a copy of the famous, or rather infamous, treaty above-mentioned, in the memoirs that Mr. Hume has been allowed to peruſe. And this is ſo much the more intereſting, in that the exiſtence of that treaty has been denied by ſome hiſtorians, and never has been hitherto proved, in a demonſtrative manner, by any."

A young fellow, of the city of Briſtol, being in London lately, was out of curioſity, led to ſee the Lunatics confined in bedlam: His firſt approach was to he cell of a poor man, to whom he addreſſed himſelf thus: "Soho! what brings thee here?" The miſerable object remaining ſilent, he repeated his queſtion, and was anſwered only by a languiſhing look, which ſo enraged the viſitant, that he immediately ſpit in his face thro' the grate; this cauſed him to gently wipe his face with a wiſp of ſtraw, and raiſing his drooping head, he made him this calm, ſage, and ſenſible reply, "Becauſe God, Sir, deprived me of that bleſſing which you never enjoyed.

Wedneſday one Griffith, a Welſh ſhoemaker in Smithfield, through a bravado of drunken heroiſm, held one of his fingers in the blaze of a candle till it was burnt to the bone: the conſequence of which will in all probability be the loſs of his arm, as the part began to mortify next morning.

From the great preparations which are making in ſeveral parts of Europe, many of our politicians conclude that a general war is not ſo diſtant as could be wiſhed. It is ſuſpected that we are again too cloſely connected with the houſe of Auſtria, which will neceſſarily throw the king of Pruſſia into the arms of France: And ſhould a war break out, Hanover would quickly be ſwallowed up, and the biſhopric of Oſnaburg would probably ſhare the ſame fate. The conſequences of which would be, that ſhould the war prove ſucceſsful on our ſide, all our advantages muſt be ſacrificed to redeem thoſe precious depoſits. It is certain that the king of Pruſſia is on the moſt friendly terms with Ruſſia, and it is rumoured that the Turks are in motion; ſo that if the terror of our navy was not kept up at a vaſt expence, we ſhould probably feel the immediate effects which are apprehended from the family compact. It is natural to conclude, that the king of Pruſſia will take the firſt opportunity of reſenting the ill treatment which, as he thinks, he has received from us: And as he has no ways of making his reſentment felt, but by oppreſſing the poor electorate, and the poorer biſhopric, it is well known to all, Europe will ſuffer by the gratification of his favourite propenſity.

Extract of a Letter from Prague, Aug. 11.

There has been, a few weeks ago, a remarkable duel fought here between two Iriſh officers in the imperial ſervice. The affair was as follows: Capt. Sullivan, who belongs to a regiment quartered in Italy, came to this city on a viſit to ſee his friends; Lieut. O'Kelly, of Kinſkay's regiment, with whom he was very intimate, made Sullivan an offer of accommodating him in his own apartment during his ſtay, which was accepted. O'Kelly being invited to dine with the grand Burgrave, took Sullivan in his hand, as his friend, but at this entertainment O'Kelly being placed at the right hand (the ſeat of honour) Sullivan took great offence that an inferior officer ſhould be ſeated above him: He ſaid little about it till ſome time after, when O'Kelly being invited to dine with count Clairen, and again taking Sullivan with him, it happened the ſame as before, for O'Kelly was univerſally well received and reſpected. Sullivan being now highly piqued, inſulted O'Kelly, charging him with taking him to dinners on purpoſe that he might be affronted; and one word bringing on another, it came to ſo great a length, that Sullivan drawing, O'Kelly was obliged to do the ſame; and calling to G—d to witneſs the neceſſity he was under of doing it, Sullivan cried out in a rage, bl---d and w---ds, who do you think will fight you when you call THAT MAN to your aid! They then made ſeveral paſſes, but were ſoon parted by the guard. Meeting a few nights afterwards at the play-houſe, Sullivan again inſiſted on fighting, when both of them retiring into a back yard, they fought for ſome time almoſt in the dark, having only the ſmall portion of light which the ſtars afforded. O'Kelly was wounded in the breaſt and wriſt, and ſoon afterwards his ſword broke, but not knowing it, he made a paſs at Sullivan, and ſtruck him on the breaſt with the now blunt point; perceiving the accident, he aſked Sullivan to let him fetch another ſword, which was agreed to; but O'Kelly now finding his wounds bleed apace, told it to his antagoniſt, who running up to him, ſaid, Dear O'Kelly, I hope you are not killed; and taking him in his arms, he carried him to a ſurgeon hard by to be dreſſed. O'Kelly ſoon recovered, and the affair being made up, Sullivan ſet off for Italy, to join his regiment."

Oct. 27. A correſpondent ſends us word, that the reading the account of a duel in our's of thurſday, between two Iriſh gentlemen, brought to his mind the following: Sir Daniel O'Carrol, an Iriſh baronet, in the reign of Queen Anne, having left the Spaniſh ſervice, in which he commanded a troop of horſe, and which he brought over with him ſome time after, met with Sir Harry O'Neal, his countryman, in the Spaniſh ſervice, who upbraided him with the treachery of his conduct; on which a challenge was given by Sir Daniel, and in the encounter Sir Harry was run through the body: On Sir Daniel's perceiving it, he ſtoop'd, and taking his wounded friend by the hand, ſaid, "Dear Sir Harry, if you are dead, ſpeak."——To which Sir Harry anſwer'd, "Not dead, but ſpeechleſs, by G—."

On Wednesday the 16th Inſtant arrived at New-York the Harriot Packet-Boat, Capt. Robinſon, in 8 Weeks and 6 Days from Falmouth, by whom we have the London Papers to the 10th of November, containing the following Advices.

LONDON, Octo. 29.

WE are told, the ſeveral councils lately held, were to read over the memorials of Pruſſia, Auſtria, and France, which have been preſented by their reſpective miniſters.

And it is ſaid, that Pruſſia deſires aſſiſtance againſt Auſtria and France, in caſe of new troubles, which he is apprehenſive of from their jealouſy of his influence in Poland; and that a ſtrong memorial has alſo been preſented to the ſtates of Holland, requeſting the ſame; and to have immediate anſwers to both.

And on the other hand it is ſaid, Auſtria and France, in their memorials, complain heavily againſt Pruſſia and Ruſſia, and inſiſt on knowing what part England intends to take in the new troubles that threaten Europe.

In anſwer to which, we are informed, that they were given to underſtand, that Great Britain would no ways interfere in the affairs of Poland, as the Poles certainly had a right to chuſe their own King; and that if they had a mind to go to war, they might fight it out among themſelves. Which anſwer, if preſevered in, it is thought, will preſerve the peace of Europe; for if we would ſay either ſide, the Germans would ſoon find an enemy.

It is ſaid there is more money now in the bank than has been known for many years, occaſioned by the owners of it waiting for the new Loan.

The very civil and polite French officers of the exciſe, ſearching the baggage of his highneſs Prince George Auguſtus of Mecklenburgh Strelitz, as he entered Parron, found half a pound of ſuperfine Spaniſh ſnuff, on which they ſeized with prodigious politeneſs; and though his highneſs aſſured them it was a preſent made him for his own uſe by Prince Maſſarano, ambaſſador from Spain to the court of Great Britain, they would not deliver the baggage, untill he paid them two hundred livers.---So very reſpectful was their behaviour to the brother of the Queen of Great Britain. They have omitted no inſtance of ſhewing their regard to us ſince the peace, which redounds ſuch glory on the miniſter that made it.

A letter from Algiers ſays, that an Engliſh frigate entered that harbour the 12th of laſt month with two white flags, one at her main and the other at her foremaſt, was ſaluted by 21 cannon from the Caſtle, to which ſhe made no return till the Engliſh Conſul came on board. Then the Commander of the frigate claimed the Genoeſe Fullucca taken by the Algerines, when under Engliſh colours, and provided with a Britiſh paſs, declaring, "that if ſhe was not directly reſtored with all her crew the peace would be broken between Great-Britain and the ſtate of Algiers." To which the Dey ſent him for anſwer, "That what was done was done, and that the Engliſh might take what courſe they thought beſt." Upon this anſwer the Commander of the frigate, without vouchſafing to receive any refreſhments, nor take charge of a letter from the Dey, put off to ſea again, ſteering towards Genoa, doubtleſs to give Commodore Harriſon an account of his miſſion.

Extract of a letter from Bruſſels, Sept. 28.

"Paris is not the only place which the Engliſh reſort to; this city comes in for a ſhare of their favours. We reckon there are above 400 perſons of faſhion, Engliſh, here at this time, who all ſpend their money generouſly, and live elegantly. The Engliſh hotel is ſo full, that within theſe few days above a dozen equipages were obliged to be diſmiſſed, becauſe they had not room to entertain them."

Yeſterday morning the celebrated Mr. Churchill, accompanied by Humphry Cotes, Eſq; ſet off for Boulogne to meet Mr. Wilkes.

On ſaturday laſt William Young and John Hunt, Eſqrs. commiſſioners for the ſales of the conquered iſlands in the Weſt Indies, ſet out to embark at Deal for their reſpective commiſſions; and we hear the ſales will certainly begin in February next.

We are informed, that a gentleman, who has cauſed much talk in the political world for ſome time paſt, has certainly been ſeen in England. This trip to his native country is ſaid to be, to prevent an Outlawry.

We hear that near 200 copies of No. 46 of the North Briton, the manuſcript of which was ſaid to be found amongſt Mr. Wilkes's papers, have been tranſcribed, and given away. It is alſo ſaid to be of an infinitely worſe tendency than No. 45.

Some people at Paris pretend to affirm, that Mr. Wilkes will ſpeedily receive an order to quit the French dominions.

The right hon. the Earl Paulett dying a batchellor, is ſucceeded in honour and eſtate by his brother Vere, now Earl Paulett.

A Gold Governor

LONDON, Nov. 1.

We are credibly informed the merchants of the three American colonies New-England, Pennſylvania, and New-York, by the late mail, have remonſtrated to the miniſtry, in very moving terms, againſt the cruel and illegal proceedings of the French Governors in the Weſt-Indies, on account of their behaviour to ſuch Britiſh ſubjects as have the misfortune, either through ſtreſs of weather, or other involuntary cauſes, to approach their coaſt: In which caſe confiſcation and impriſonment enſue. It is ſaid this petition, couched in the beſt terms, will occaſion ſuch a fleet to be conſtantly kept cruiſing in the Weſt-Indies, that ſhall not only revenge the paſt, but prevent the future inſult to the meaneſt of his Majeſty's ſubjects in that part of the world.

We hear, that a memorial being preſented by the Earl of Hertford to the French court, ſetting forth the illegal proceeding of the Governor of Goree, in attempting to eſtabliſh a ſettlement near the river Gambia, in Africa, that court has declared its diſapprobation of his proceedings, and he is recalled to give an account of his irregular behaviour.

They write from Londonderry, in Ireland, that the merchants there are going to put up two whole length pictures of the Right Hon. the lord chief juſtice Pratt and Mr. Pitt, in the guild-hall of that loyal city.

Extract of a Letter from Paris, Oct. 20.

"It is now whiſpered, that the late embarkations to Cayenne in the Weſt-Indies, are not more with a view to the better cultivation of that iſland, than to effect a French ſettlement in the gulf of Darien, near the iſthmus."

We are informed a young Weſt-Indian of fortune loſt no leſs than ſeven thouſand guineas at the late Newmarket races, by betts on the duke of Grafton's Antonius.

Several gardeners and huſbandmen, have within theſe few days, engaged themſelves to go to New-York, where great encouragе is given them.

It was yeſterday reported, that a letter was received from Boulogne ſur Mer, that the Rev. Mr. Churchill was attended by four phyſicians, and it was tho't impoſſible for him to live two hours.

Extract of a Letter from Paris, Octo. 22.

"We are aſſured ſeveral flat-bottomed-boats are to accompany the ſquadron and troops deſtined for the iſland of Corſica, as it is now ſaid, nothing leſs than the total reduction of the whole iſland to the juriſdiction of the Genoeſe, is the main deſign of this embarkation."

The beginning of laſt week three Cherokee kings arrived at the Black Bear, in Piccadily, with their attendants, in nine poſt-chaiſes; they were brought over by Capt. Timberlake, who brought over the former Cherokee Kings, and reſide at preſent in St. Martin's ſtreet, Leiceſter fields.

The greateſt number of public and private bills, we are informed, are now finiſhed for the inſpection of Parliament, that have ever been preſented in any one ſeſſions for twenty years paſt.

A private letter from Paris mentions, that the land forces now aſſembling at Breſt, are not ſo much to augment the fortifications of that place, as to be ready to embark on board a ſquadron now collecting there, on a ſecret expedition of great importance; but its deſtination is unknown.

Nov. 8. Laſt ſaturday died, in Long's-court St. Martin's-ſtreet, Leiceſter-fields, Mr. Aaron Bartholomew Trueheart, of Virginia, who had the care of the Cherokee Indians now in town.

On thurſday laſt, the 1ſt inſt. John Wilkes, Eſq; had ſentence of outlawry pronounced againſt him, at the ſheriff's county court in Holborn, by the ſheriff, coroner and other officers.

We are informed a reſolution has lately been taken to erect ſome ſtrong fortifications on the iſland of Anticoſti, in the gulph of St. Laurence, which from ſome late ſurveys has been found to be a place of great conſequence, in caſe of any future war.

This day Sir William Stephenſon, Knight, Lord Mayor elect, was ſworn into that high office, and the city regalia delivered to him.

It is ſaid a new academy, in the manner of that at Woolwich, is to be endowed at New-York, for the future training up young gentlemen in the art of engineering, and to ſupply the artillery of that and the neighbouring provinces, without being under the neceſſity of being obliged to have freſh draughts from the royal artillery of England.

It is ſaid, that a ſcheme is now under conſideration for leſſening the national debt by an annuity lottery. The tickets are to be 100l. each, to be purchaſed at Par at the bank for a limited time, thereby to hinder the evil effects of Alley-Jobbing: The blanks are to be an annuity of three per cent for the life of the owner. Eight per cent. Intereſt to be allowed upon the whole ſum to be raiſed, three per cent, of which to be for the blanks as above, and from the other five &c. to be deducted, and the remainder to be divided in prizes.

We are informed, an eſtimate of the civil eſtabliſhment of each of the Britiſh colonies in North America is now making out, in order to be preſented to parliament.

Extract of a Letter from Dublin, Oct. 30.

A great number of orders are come over to this kingdom for butter, in particular for the port of London, yet the prices do not riſe, which ſhews we have plenty; butter in caſks, the laſt market day, at Cork, ſold for 29s. Iriſh, the cwt. ditto, in full bound, 31s. ditto, in coarſe firkins, 29s. which is leſs than three pence per lb. Engliſh; and at Limerick it ſold in large caſks for 30s. per cwt. ſo that you will have it on your ſide of the water very good and cheap, if ſome particulars do not, as they formerly did, ſell rank Scotch ſtinking butter for Iriſh.

It is reported that a great ſum has been offered to the relict of a certain great ſtateſman for the copies of ſome of his papers; and that great ſums have alſo been offered her, not to part with them.

Nov. 9. Authentic accounts from Leghorn adviſe, that the Corſican Malecontents can bring fifty thouſand men into the field, twenty thouſand of which are veteran troops, and inured to action, and the whole by means of ſome late underhand ſupplies, all well armed.

They write from Corſica, that ſeveral officers of the Malecontents, ſeduced by motives of gain, formed a reſolution to maſſacre Paſcal Paoli, who is now arrived at 80 years of age. They were aſſembled at a public houſe to concert meaſures for the execution of their deſign, where they let drop ſome unguarded expreſſions, which eſcaped in the warmth of their debates, and which were overheard by the maſter of the houſe, who gave information thereof. The conſpirators were arreſted, and carried before Paoli, who addreſſed himſelf to them thus: 'Gentlemen, although you propoſed to take away 'my life, which gives me a lawful power over your's, 'I will not take that advantage. Return then in 'peace, and examine from this moment, whether 'I deſerve your enmity. I am ready to ſubmit, if 'you find a ſingle article to lay to my charge.' The officers in confuſion confeſſed their crime, ſhewed a ſincere repentance, acknowledg'd they were corrupted to the undertaking the baſe purpoſe, but without naming their employers. Paoli diſplayed farther magnanimity in not preſſing them to a diſcovery. A rare exemple of moderation, which will be more admired than imitated.

It is rumoured that the King has been defrauded of 15 or 20,000 l. ſterling of his revenue in America, and that Governor G—bs, of Anguilla, and another G—r (of as good a character) upon that continent, are beſt acquainted with the affair.

Letters from Warſaw, of the 8th ult. relate the following particulars of the late ſudden irruption of the Pruſſian Huſſars in Great Poland, authentic, viz. Capt. Fermelli, who commanded the detachment, ruſhed unexpectedly, with his men ſword in hand, into the lands of Prince Sulkowſki, General in the ſervice of the Empreſs Queen, diſarmed his guard at Zduny, and took away what perſons they tho't proper: In the mean time other ſmall parties of Huſſars poſſeſſed themſelves of the avenues of Koboln, d'Olanow, Szulmiezn, and the adjacent villages; from whence they carried off by force, M. Koſchenbahr, Commiſſary of Oſten, with a number of Burghers and other inhabitants, who were born indeed in Sileſia, but had ſettled in Poland many years; and all this without paying any deference to age or rank. WILLIAMSBURG, in Virginia, Dec. 14.

A Caution to be considered as one of the striking anecdotes that will preserve the remembrance of the year 1764 down to the latest posterity.

IT has been a practice, almost time out of mind, with traders and planters in this colony, to remove by water from one port or district to another, effects (that cannot be comprehended within the forbidding words of a fraudulent or contraband trade) without calling at the office of the port from whence or to which they transport the goods for proper permits; but from a recent, notable instance, it seems to be necessary to admonish all traders and others, that every commodity found under such a circumstance will be seized, by authority derived from the Parliament for that purpose, however delaying and expensive such a measure may prove to the honest man who gets his bread by oysters or oyster shells, or that trades only in commodities not subject to any duty by any law whatever, or to the planter who removes things of his own growth from one plantation to another, situated on different rivers or districts. They all will, it is hoped, be thankful for this caution, and with duty submit, as children do to rods exercised by cruel and inconsiderate parents. Time, which has brought many (once) unlikely things to pass, may mature every little state of infancy into a robust and more manly condition; and then perhaps some parents will judge it convenient to relax into a more natural family connexion, for it is of divine truth, that kingdoms divided against themselves cannot stand; and in the histories of Imperial travels, we read that cruelty and severity have produced their several evils as well as luxury. The honest admonition of one who is Et patris et patriæ fidelis servus.

PROVIDENCE, Rhode-Island, Jan. 19.

A correspondent, in a letter to the publisher, after mentioning the grievous, unjust and impolitic measures adopted and pursued by the British government, with regard to the Northern colonies, the inhabitants of which, as he observes, begin already to feel the rod of oppression, from those they fain would have considered the Guardians of their liberty, adds, facetiously enough, that "It is thought by 'the rules of analogy only, it may be made appa-'rent, nigh demonstration, that the Northern colo-'nies have the greatest reason to fear that a short 'time they will be absolutely restricted from using 'any articles of cloathing, or hard ware, of their 'own fabric, as such practices are found utterly in-'consistent with the goods of the mother country; 'and that a non-compliance, on our part, with such 'new regulations, (for instance catching a mouse, 'within his Majesty's said colonies, with a trap of 'our own make) will be deemed, in the ministerial 'cant, an infamous, atrocious, and nefarious crime."

NEWPORT, January 21.

Since our last the captain of the brig lately drove ashore at Block-Island, arrived in town.---She is the Golden Grove, Robert Chitty, Master, belonging to Chichester, and was bound from Cork to Halifax, laden with Pork and Butter.----Some of her cargo was thrown over in the passage, but the greatest part is like to be saved. The vessel, it was probable, would be lost. She was out above 60 days.

Great quantities of the cargo of the sloop Don Carlos, Capt. Cozzens, we hear are drove ashore on Long-Island.---Besides a valuable cargo, it is said, 150 l. sterling in cash was on board, belonging to some gentlemen in town.---The number of persons was six, viz. the master, Robert Cozzens, mate, one Mr. Dickinson, passenger, late a midshipman of the Maidstone man of war, an apprentice lad an Indian and a Negro.——In what manner this sorrowful catastrophe happened, will perhaps never be ascertained, as it is beyond all doubt the whole number perished.
